Oxford County Sheriff Lloyd "Skip" Herrick said he thinks they may have good reason to wonder. "I've only been here since January,"

Herrick said, "but I think we are seeing an escalation in theft and burglary. Some of it may be due to the economy-and the drug situation hasn't gotten any better. People are committing burglary and theft to support their habits.'

In Andover, no burglaries and seven thefts have been reported this year. Last year eight burglaries and five thefts were reported. Quinn said he has about 20 more reports from Andover to enter into the computer.

Andover has its own police department, but the sheriff's office records the town's incident reports. The Citizen was unable to contact Andover's police chief Tony Milligan, but at a recent selectman's meeting, Barbara Honkala's interest in trees led her through a career in forestry—a field few women chose for an occupation in the 1940s when she entered college-and culminated with her contributing to a set of guide books on the trees of North America.

The Bethel native helped edit, research and write a two-volume guide book, "Silvics of North American Trees: Conifers and Hardwoods," during her final years with the Department of Agriculture.

The books describe the silvics of over 200 trees (their life history, characteristics and ecology, especially in stands) and also includes individual tree range maps.

DEP-Greenwood tire site meeting delayed

The on-again-off-again shutdown of Maine state government forced the postponement of last week's scheduled meeting between the Greenwood Board of Selectmen and Dean Marriott, commissioner of the state Department of Environmental Protection.

The meeting had been arranged by state Rep. Richard Bennett, R-Norway, in order to allow the local selectmen to express their concerns regarding the possible licensing of the tire storage/recycling site operated by Peter Gordon on the Rabbit Road in Greenwood.

Bennett said the meeting will be rescheduled, but probably not until the state's budget situation is straightened out. Greenwood Selectman Marie Bartlett said it is the town's understanding that Marriott will still hold to his promise not to sign a license for the site until after he has had a chance to meet with the selectmen. In a related action, the Bethel Board

Lakes association expands monitoring of water quality

The Community Lakes Association of Woodstock and Greenwood has voted to add Round Pond to the local lakes it monitors each summer. Two years ago the association's water-quality-monitoring program looked at the three local lakes; this summer it includes five lakes. With the addition of Round Pond (and Shagg Pond, which is monitored by the Town of Woodstock), all of the major ponds and lakes in the two towns will now be included in the monitoring.

At the association's annual meeting Saturday, the two-dozen members present voted unanimously to allocate $540 for the monitoring program. See LAKE ASSOCIATION, page 2

Spare the suds; save the lakes

"Lakes are temporary phenomena on the earth's surface, and man's influence can make them even more temporary," Rep. Al Barth told the annual meeting of the Community Lakes Association of Woodstock and Greenwood at the group's annual meeting Saturday.

He's certainly right. Our local lakes are the gems of this part of Maine (and a blessing on these hazy, hot and humid days of midsummer) but the lakes are not as tough and enduring as the diamonds they so often resemble.

Fortunately, the number one threat to the clear water we all delight in-phosphorus-is also one of the easiest to control. Phosphorus is a natural element essential to life, but an overload of phosphorus in a lake can lead to algae blooms, oxygen depletion, dead fish, and ultimately to a dead lake.

By now most shorefront property owners know the dangers of using phosphorous-rich fertilizers, and of stripping away the vegetation that serves as a buffer or filter to chemicals that would otherwise enter the lake.

But even those of us who are only occasional visitors to the lakes have an important role to play in protecting them from phosphorus-by avoiding needless washing near the lakes and, when we must wash, by using low- or no-phosphate cleaning products.

This is especially important in summer camps with marginal septic systems or with graywater systems that offer only a brief pause on the wastewater's inevitable way to the lake,

Maine has come a long way in stabilizing and improving the water quality in its lakes, but—as China Lake reminds us—we can never afford to take their transitory beauty for granted.

From Washington—

Sen. William Cohen Helping Maine's towns

help themselves When a delegation from the Maine

Municipal Association visited Washington earlier this year, its members sent a message that came through loud and clear. Awash in a sea of federal mandates, the towns feel they are drowning. Requirements from a host of federal environmental laws are creating an impossible financial burden for the communities' small tax bases, and town officials are very unhappy. In Wilton, for example, only 950 of its 4,200 residents use the municipal water system, but the community nonetheless has to pay about $3.65 million to comply with the Safe Drinking Water Act, according to Town Manger Richard Davis. In Mechanic Falls, Town Manager

Dana Lee says the town's 2,912 residents will need to draw as much as $1.8 million from their $71 million tax base to comply with Clean Water Act requirements on storm water. And those are just single instances of federal mandates. Towns can-and often do-face equally difficult requirements simultaneously under such others laws as the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act, the Toxic Substances Control Act and the Superfund law. "For a town with small tax base to come up with one-point anything million (dollars) is astounding." says Lee. "I understand the environmental concern involved but we just don't have the resources to cover it all." The federal government does have loan and grant programs to help communities pay these kinds of bills, but the $500 million in loans and $300 million in grants available nationwide clearly is inadequate. Maine alone needs $500 million to comply with the Safe Drinking Water Act and $1 billion to meet storm water separation reguirements under the Clean Water

With help clearly needed, I have joined four of my Senate colleagues in introducing the Small Town Environmental Planning Act to assist towns under 5,000 meet federal mandates. If the measure becomes law, about 90 percent of Maine's communities will benefit, although I am also working to devise methods of helping the state's bigger cities as

Sen. George Mitchell Protecting the quality of our lakes

As we head into the warm summer months, Maine's beautiful lakes beckon with opportunities for fishing. swimming and boating, as well as for peaceful retreat. Maine has over 5,800 lakes, and they are known far and wide for their exceptional beauty and quality. Beyond their recreational value, our lakes are important for both the economy and the environmental in- site. tegrity of the state. largest cities, such as Portland, Lakes around the country have been facing increasing water quality problems. The Environmental Protection Agency estimates that 25 percent of the nation's lakes are impaired by Lake Association pollution, and that an additional 20 percent are threatened by pollution.

It is clear that we must act promptly not only to address existing lake pollution problems, but to prevent lake pollution from becoming an unmanageable and costly problem.

I recently introduced comprehensive legislation to address a variety of the problems facing lakes across the country. The bill would build on and strengthen the Clean Lake program included in the federal Clean Water Act in several important ways.

First, the measure would help increase research on lake pollution, which has lagged behind research on other types of water bodies. The bill also provides a means to assure that lake water quality is protected by pollution standards to the same extent as water in streams and Under the bill, the EPA is to develop scientific information for pollutants which are special problems in lakes. States will then designate uses for lakes and adopt water-quality standards to assure that lakes are protected.

To help states carry out lake management programs, the bill increased funding for the existing clean lakes grant program from $30 to $50 million per year. New authority for See MITCHELL, page 5

RODNEY SAYS THANKS

To the Editor: I would like to extend my sincere appreciation to the selectmen and the citizens of Bethel for dedicating the Annual Town Report to me for my service to the Town of Bethel as Town Manager from 1985-1990. Needless to say I was both very surprised and very pleased with this honor. It was an honor that I will always remember as a special event in my life. Again thank you.

DON'T GIVE UP NTL WITHOUT A GOOD FIGHT

To the Editor: As a professional member of the NTL Institute for over 20 years and a summer NTLer to Bethel for as many, I am both embarrassed and dismayed by the recent NTL board decision to abandon Bethel as a primary training

I hope Bethel residents and business people recognize that the board decision is distinct from the sentiments of the members. Indeed, as a member organization we have never had a referendum on anything. In the present case, members were sent an incompetently designed survey after the NTL/Bethel decision was made. NTL members were informed of the decision via an impersonal, unsigned "press release." The insensitivity of the board to both the Bethel community and to NTL members is striking given NTL's espoused values, vision and credo. Half the board members have only been in the organization a to the collective conscience of the organization, reminding members of NTL's history, new vision, and social responsibility. The executive director of NTL should not conduct your meetings. He carries the message of the board, voted with the board to leave Bethel, and has a vested interest in that decision and not the community.

Your chamber of commerce has credibility and contacts with many businesses including Fortune 500 companies. NTL stands to lose a great deal of business with bad publicity about the way in which the Bethel business community was dealt with. Portland and other city news media, television, radio, and newspapers would be quite happy to report the NTL/Bethel story, none of which would help NTL's already tarnished possibility of pushing for enabling resources.

The Bethel community can also continue to work closely with NTL around issues of transportation (to and from the airport), racism, housing, communication (access to telephone and fax machines), and other problems mutually determined.

If the financial and social reasons (still vaguely stated) for NTL to leave Bethel prove to be valid, then I believe that NTL should provide a consultant to work with the community for at least two years. Ethics, morality, and social responsibility dictate that at However, Bethel is NTL's spiritual home as well as a summer training site. I believe it is in the best interest of both NTL and the Bethel community for NTL to retain its presence in Bethel. Help make it happen in a constructive, assertive, action oriented way.

.Editor's note: This letter was submitted by Llewllyn Cobb's mother, Mary, Cobb wrote to his grandmother, Ruby Emery, of Woodstock about his experiences in the Persian Gulf after Operation Desert Storm. He is currently stationed in Germany.

Dear Grammie,

Well, I finally made it back from the sands of West Asia. It was hot when I left, 120 degrees and sand blowing like a hurricane. I have had sand in every orifice. It's a good thing I don't have hemorrhoids.

The desert was interesting. However, being in it for four months was not my idea of an extended vacation. I got home in the middle of May and just made Trinisa's birthday. She was nice enough to wait for me to start walking. Two days after I got back she took the first unassisted steps the day before her birthday. So she is not the almost crawling baby I left, but a walking, talking (well, we think so) little person. And yes she has her own distinct personality.

Becky, Trinisa and Sheba were at the post when I got there at 4:30 in the morning. The unit had told them that the plane came in at 2 a.m. so she of course got there early just in case. So that first day was rather long. Tinisa took about ten minutes before she realized who I was, but I expected it to take longer than that. I guess we underestimate children sometimes. They are more perceptive than we give them credit blow accounts of what was going on. I was with the 7th Corps, that went through Iraq, around Kuwait and into it from the west side. The most dangerous part for me and my unit was the minefields and unexploded munitions from all the bombing we did.

After four days of the ground war we moved back into Iraq and set up the border guard posts and patrols, then the POW and refugee camps. I wasn't really needed at the time to cook so I drove some POWs south to Saudi a few times. They were in pitiful shape; hungry, disenchanted and some even had rags for boots.

The mess hall had a water truck and I got to go to some of the smaller refugee processing camps to pump water for some of them from around Saffron and Basra, Iraq. It's really sad to see the little ones lined up with whatever they could find for a container and then to have some adults push and shove them around out of the way. It is hard for Americans to understand what the regular people went through because of So Damn Insane. Many of them were not even aware of what was going on until the planes and bombs started.

argued: "The easement area is to be maintained in perpetuity as a managed forest. We consider that this is definitely in the public interest: it maintains a productive woodlot that might otherwise be lost; it maintains an area of wildlife habitat that might otherwise be disrupted; it minimizes the loss of scenic values: the area currently contributes to a very scenic overall vista viewed from Vernon Street, Eden Ridge, Paradise Hill, etc.; it maintains for snowmobilers using the current trail the same forested environment they currently enjoy.

"Furthermore," Hatch wrote, "the town's cooperation in fostering this development could encourage other conservation-minded developments." At Monday's meeting, John Laban, project manager for Forest Homes, made many of the same points. And, he told the selectmen, "The values (the easement) represents have been mentioned time and time again in the town's comprehensive plan." Henley, however, argued against the plan. Noting that the general public would not be entitled to use the conservation area, she wrote to the commission that if it became the easement holder (the commission would act for the town): "You are assuming a duty in perpetuity. The authority the commission is given to enforce the provisions of the easement will involve significant legal expenditures. And since there is no public access to the property, why should you, a public entity, be involved? It would seem a property owners' association would be a better choice."

At Monday's meeting, Henley told the selectmen: 'I really hate to be the

Sen. Cohen calls for Medicare policy changes Concerned that millions of lowincome senior citizens are paying thousands of dollars for Medicare benefits they should receive without charge, Sen. Bill Cohen has asked the government to take steps to ensure these benefits get to the right people. "Many low-income individuals are paying $1,000 a year or more to cover the cost of Medicare premiums, deductibles and copayments, which, by law, should be paid by Medicaid," the Senator said in a letter to Health and Human Services Secretary Louis W. Sullivan.

And Cohen, who is the senior Republican on the Senate Select Committee on Aging, called on the secretary to make a number of policy changes to correct the problem.
Cohen cited a study prepared by the Families USA Foundation, which indicates that between 2.2 million and 2.3 million low-income seniors nationwide-approximately half of those eligible—are not receiving the so-called "buy-in" benefit even though they are entitled to it.

As part of last year's budget agreement, Congress expanded the benefit to all elderly and disabled individuals with incomes below the poverty line. As a result, they are eligible to have Medicaid pay their $29.90 monthly Medicare premium plus the first $100 in doctor bills and $628 in hospital bills. Higher income Medicare beneficiaries must cover the costs themselves.

"Many low-income seniors, particularly those with medical problems, have a difficult time covering even basic needs such as food and rent," Cohen said. "They certainly should not have to pay needlessly for a benefit that Congress has authorized Medicaid to pay for them."

To assist the eligible, he called for development of an outreach program, carried out by the Health Care Financing and Social Security Administrations in cooperation with the states, to ensure that all low-income seniors get the benefits the law provides.

ing on the guides, but it was a career that seemed unlikely at the start. In the 1940s, when Barbara entered the University of Maine, she wanted to study forestry, but the university told her there was no program for women. So she majored in botany. "It was the closest I could get to what I want to do," she said. She also took as many forestry courses as the university would allow. But forestry would have to wait. After graduation in 1950, Barbara married Rudy Honkala, a cold weather researcher. The couple moved to Alaska in 1951 and worked as a weather surveillance team. "Our folks were a little bit worried," Barbara said. "It was during the cold war and we were on Saint Lawrence Island, only 45 miles from Siberia. I used to dream about trees and green lawns. There were no trees on the island." The Honkala's first child was born in Alaska. After two years there they decided it was too difficult to continue the weather observation job and raise children, so they left Alaska. For the next few years the couple moved around in Maine and New Hampshire, before eventually settling in Montana

Barbara was quick to apply for work. has come a long way."

Her background in botany got her a job with the agency researching forest insects. "I just loved it," she said, "out in the woods all day. I've always liked bugs,"

She worked in Montana for several years. Later, her husband's work took him to Washington, D.C., but the forest service refused to grant her a transfer. Honkala said that she pestered the overseers of the forest service, the U.S. Department of Agriculture, in Washington, D.C. until they hired her, part-time at first, but she was soon offered full-time work. From 1973 until her retirement in 1986 she worked on the Forest Management Research

There, she helped edit 17 publications including the recently released guide books to North American Trees. Honkala has donated copies of "Silvics of North American Trees" to the Evans Notch Ranger District.

Although retired since 1986 Barabara said she enjoys meeting and talking with women who are now employed by the forest servicesharing their experiences in an oc-to account their needs and their ability to pay. Participating towns would set their own priorities and schedules for meeting federal requirements using guidelines established by the Environmental Protection Agency.

In effect, they would be able to spread out their compliance similar to the way mortgage payments are spread over a long period of time. This system would bring a bit more reason to this process by establishing a priority system rather than burdening the towns all at once with mandate after mandate.

I do not believe we should repeal these laws or exempt towns from meeting their requirements because of cost. The elimination of contamination in our drinking water is a laudable goal, as is the reduction of polution in our rivers, lakes and oceans.

But we must recognize the hardships confronting communities and their residents, who are often facing eroding tax bases as well as reductions in general assistance, fuel assistance and other programs at the same time they must spend thousands and sometimes millions of dollars to respond to often burdensome federal dictates.

statewide lake protection efforts is also provided. The bill also adds two Maine lakes, China Lake and Sebago Lake, to the existing national list of some 12 lakes to be considered for special demonstration grant assistance. These lakes were suggested by the Maine Department of Environmental Protection as most appropriate for this assistance.

A major contributor to lake pollution is excessive nutrients, including phosphorus. A significant source of phosphorus is detergent products which enter lakes from sewage treatment plants or as runoff from poorly functioning septic systems. My bill would reduce phosphate pollution by requiring phase-out of phosphates in detergents over a five-year period. Finally, the legislation would focus existing agriculture land management and grant assistance programs of the Department of Agriculture on watersheds, land that drains into lakes, that are found by states to have water quality problems. These programs include the Water Quality Incentives Program and the Conservation Reserve Program. I look forward to working with people in Maine and in Washington to develop this legislation. We must provide the best possible protection for our lakes, so that we can enjoy their many benefits in the summer and throughout the year.

Milligan said, "so far the complaints in the town have exceeded complaints received the whole of last year." Quinn, however, cautioned reading too much into the differences in townto-town statistics. Situations in the different towns vary, he pointed out.

Quinn said, for example, that the town of Paris has only one pond with one camp on it, but Norway has hundreds of waterside camps. So Norway would expect to have a high number of break-ins, where Paris would not. He also cautioned local residents against assuming today's statistics are much higher than in the "old

"There's not in my mind a decided increase in crime over the last few years, so much as there is a better reporting system," Quinn said. "The better the system, the more accurate the totals." The better reporting system, he said, would make totals now appear higher than before the department's computerization.

The Lovejoy family and friends got together for a good time on the fourth of July. They usually have a gettogether and did, this year as the other years. Those present were: Helena Bartlett of Bethel, Impi and Raymond Mack, West Paris, Alias and Faylene McKeen of West Paris, Sonya and Victor Haverinen with daughter Jennifer. Tammy and Rick Farnum with daughter Angela of Bryant Pond, Alan Lovejoy and Joel Martino and hopefully we haven't left anyone out. I apologize if I have spelled names wrong. Just hope all had a good time at the get-together.

Jennifer stayed up to visit with the Lovejoy girls and I'm sure had a ball. Marcia Baxter spent her weeks vacation visiting with members of her family in different places.

A good turnout at the dance Saturday evening and all seemed to have a good time. The next dances will be the first two Saturdays of August, back to back so to speak. Write the dates down and come for a grand time.

Russell works in his garden and it is growing good considering how dry it is. He puts in a great many hours of labor there so hope the results will be worth it.

Take care one and all and have a good week ahead and hopefully it won't be too hot.

Newry By JIM ANDERSON

Tuesday night at the Sunday River Fire House, there was a meeting of the Oxford Republicans. Thanks to Les Otten and a Mr. Flint, the county Republicans did not have to eat off the floor. Besides setting up the chairs and placing the chairs around, I had the fun at the end of the meeting of backing up three fire trucks. Two were from Newry and the third was Bethel's Ladder Truck. Earlier the chief had told me to move the trucks out of the station and thanks to him, I could get Bethel's truck in without any problem. Of course, the people who were hanging around were smoked out, but so it goes with trucks. Oh you of little faith, thought I was going to hit a table! When you sit in the cab of the Maxim and see the distance from the door that the truck usually is and how much room it takes up, you can't hit a table moved out of range! There were 30 people there and 27 out of the 30 were impressed with the station. The three that weren't were myself, mother (who has been there before), and our number one selectmen, Steve Wight. Besides Les Otten and Mr. Flint, I'd like to thank Jim Bennett and friend who moved the

LEGEND OF MOLLY OCKETT

Molly Ockett, Indian maiden,

Loved to roam in every weather;

Lived and loved her Indian people

In their wigwams on the heather

Lived and mated with Sabbatis

On the hills of sloping Bethel;

Bore him there three dark-skinned babies

Eyes as dark as pansy petal;

Molly learned to read and write

Learned to talk the white man's way;

Taught her children to be Christians,

Taught them how to kneel and pray;

Taught them of the loving Spirit

How He sends the sun and rain

Provides food for Indian babies

Heals their sickness and their pain;

Told them of the roots and herbs.

Goes the story of Moll Ockett

Visited and helped the sick ones Put not one penny in her pocket For these little deeds of kindness

Only asked the spirits' blessing;

Loved the paleface and their babies,

Spoke with gentle voice, confessing Just to hold the white man's children

Marvelled at their eyes so blue

Loved their flowing curls so fair

And their skin of lightest hue.

Molly Ockett loved the wild woods

Bringing back the moose and bear, Searched the mountains for its treasures

Knew of riches buried there.

Goes the story how some Indians,

in the year of 1755

Buried treasure near an elm tree,

Left some traps there for a guide;

Later years they found the big elm,

With the traps grown in the tree,

And they named the spot Traps Corner Masking legend, history.

Then the white men digged and rooted

Till they gave up in despair; Told how Molly Ockett fooled them,

Found no treasure buried there.

Once Moll Ockett from Andover On a cold and bitter day

Found herself so tired, weary

Paused at Snow Falls on her way;

Knocked at every door and pleaded For a place to lay her head,

How they shut their doors upon her,

Then this curse upon them said:

In this place you will never prosper

For Moll Lockett leaves her curse;

Never will you grow in riches

Have no money in your purse;

Generations will know your story

Time will prove that it is so, For the good book plainly tells you

How to plant and what to sow; I am but a dark-skinned Indian

And I'll travel on my way,

Find a pale face with a kind heart

That will ask me in to stay.

So to Paris Hill she journeyed To the finest place up there, There they took her in and fed her Gave to her their tender care; Molly nursed the white man's baby Said a great man it would be,

Blessed it, her words proved prophetic,

For later, vice-president was he.

When Moll Ockett came to die,

Mary Agatha, known as Molly Ockett, Died in Christian faith, August 2, 1816,

The last and great Pequakett.

Written by Helen K. Poland

who died in 1953

She begged of those around her this request That they lay her on the green grass On the spot that she loved best; There her last brief moments ended,

Pharmacy & Your Health

David Preble, Prim's Pharmacy Otitis Externa is "Swimmer's Ear"

An infection of the ear canal brought on by the presence of too much moisture in the external ear is commonly referred to as "swimmer's ear." The technical or medical name for this condition is otitis externa, meaning inflammation of the external ear canal.

Very often otitis externa results from water entering the ear during diving or swimming. Water may become trapped in the ear due to the presence of excessive ear wax. The moisture softens and wears away skin lining the outer canal. This makes the canal more susceptible to infection. Other causes of otitis externa include hair dye, hair spray, or excessive cleaning of the ears with cotton swabs. The ear canal may itch and become inflamed. Fluid may drain from the ear at night and often can be seen on pillows the next morning.

Although nonprescription ear cleaners are available, many authorities recommend professional removal of ear wax. Ear drops may be effective in relieving pain and itching. Aluminum acetate drops may help decrease swelling and ear canal crusting. Oral pain relievers may help. Antibiotics or antifungals sometimes are needed.

Esther Crockett is chairperson for the Mollyockett Day lobster roll booth and she reported that all is well with the planning of it. Robin reported that the Chamber is still accepting Mollyockett Day Classic preregistrations until Thursday at 4 p.m. Registration can also be done at the day of the race from 7:30-8:15 a.m. Sponsors for the event this year are Sunday River Ski Resort, Bethel Savings Bank, Central Maine Power, Pepsi and Groan & McGurn. We welcome walkers to participate this year.

Robin announced that the Chamber is coordinating advertising cooperatives in the New England Skier's Guide and the Maine Guide to Winter.

Linda Varrell reported that she and George Larson met to discuss the Chamber's long range goals and would have a more detailed report for the board next month.

It was decided that the Chamber would try to have a booth at Andover Olde Home Days. Robin will be coordinating the project.

Bill Riley advised the board that planning is well underway for the Eastern States Exposition in September. The Rangeley Lakes Chamber, the Oxford Hills Chamber, the Bridgton Lakes Region Chamber, the Bethel Area Chamber and possibly the Sugarloaf Area Chamber and the Western Maine Mountains Chamber in Wilton will all be a part of our regional exhibit there.

CROP CERTIFICATION DEADLINE All Oxford County farmers have been asked to certify their 1991 crop plantings, acreage conservation reserve and other program acreages with the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

"Certification is the procedure by which farmers report their program acreages to establish their eligibility to receive the benefits of price support, deficiency payments and other farm program benefits," ASCS official Beverly Stevens said.

In Oxford County, the final certification date for all crops is August 1, 1991. Stevens said that growers not participating in the 1991 programs should report their acreages to establish planting history, to ensure future benefits and protect crop acreage

After certification, the ASCS county office will select farms at random to verify that acreage reports are accurate. Aerial photographs are available for farmers to help identify their fields.

CARD OF THANKS

The family of John Currier would like to thank the many friends and relatives for their prayers, support, and thoughtfulness during this time of bereavement. The cards, flowers, and contributions in his behalf were especially gratifying to the family. We wish to thank the dedicated doctors and nurses of Stephens Memorial. Hospital for the excellent care given him. A special thanks to Rev. Ron Ashworth for his comforting and deeply moving service, that brought special thoughts and memories to us

Golf fore sight at Bethel Inn Country Club

A free round of golf at the Bethel Country Club is just one of the benefits of purchasing a 1991 Golf Fore Site

Purchasers also get free rounds at 25 other courses across New England. The $25 price helps fund the free eye health and eye safety programs of the National Society to Prevent Blindness and it's New England Affiliates.

Golfers will find their cards honored at-participating courses in Connecticut, Massachusetts, Vermont, Rhode Island, and New Hampshire, as well as Maine. Other local courses include Samoset Country Club in Rockport, Highland Links Country Club in Plymouth, N.H., and Mount Snow Country Club in Vermont. Some restrictions apply.

For more information, or to order your card by Visa or MasterCard, call the Connecticut Society to Prevent Blindness at 203-347-6800, or send your check for $25 per card to Prevent Blindness, 1275 Washington Street, Middletown, Conn., 06457.

Proceeds from card sales will be channeled through the Connecticut Society to Prevent Blindness to the National Society and other New England Affiliates, dedicated to saving sight through eye screenings, public and professional education, and eye safety activities for schools and industry.

Small business loans now available statewide

The Job Start Program, delivered by Community Concepts, Inc., provides low interest loans for persons with low to moderate income wishing to expand a current business, or start a new business. Loan proceeds can be used for most prudent business activities such as start-up cost, equipment or inventory.

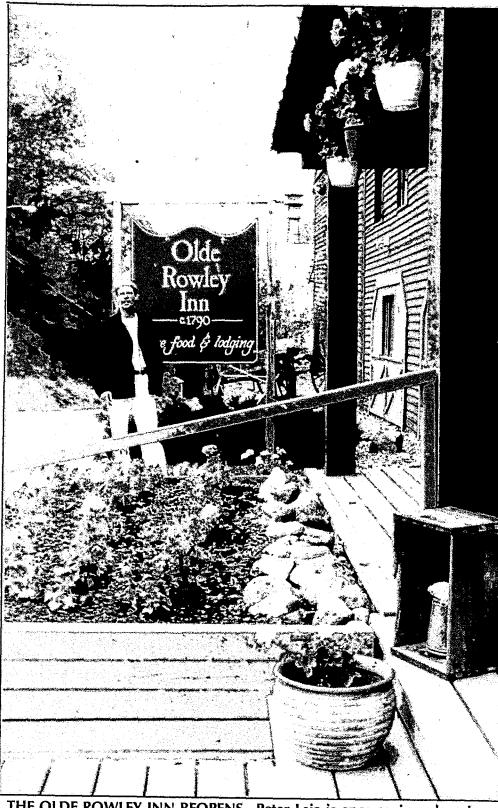

The Finance Authority of Maine has announced the statewide availability of the Job Start Program, with loans up to $10,000 at 2 percent below the New York Prime.

For information on the Job Start Program, call Community Concepts any weekday afternoon at 743-7716.

NTL Notes:

NTL Institute's 45th summer season of programs in human resource development continues this week with six new programs whose participants and staff arrived last Monday.

The total NTL population remains high, with more than 200 people involved in the sessions. This week the Bethel Inn Gibson Room is being used as a meeting space, in addition to the NTL Conference House, Crescent Park School and the Bethel Inn Conference Center that have been used for

THE OLDE ROWLEY INN REOPENS—Peter Leja is once again welcoming diners at the Olde Rowley Inn in North Waterford. The inn was closed last year, but has now been purchased by David and Tina Buckley, who have hired Leja, its former owner/operator, to run it again. The inn is open for dining seven days a week. The menu offers a variety of steak, roast pork, chicken and seafood specialties. The kitchen is now staffed by Buck Buckley of Florida and Merle McAllister, who has cooked at the inn kitchen for many (Photo by Wendy Hanscom)

ranging from communication and ing this week as follows: team building, to the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator and developing your staff, to interpersonal styles and effectiveness. The ever popular entry program, Human Interaction, continues with another session this week as well. At the Monday orientation/transition session, Nan Timberlake welcomed the group on behalf of Bethel and the Bethel/NTL Liaison Committee.

Dorothy Vials-Weber, who led the Monday session and who has been in residence for the past four weeks, will be completing her term as overall dean on Sunday.

News from the Bethel Area Health Center

The issue of domestic violence, and particularly its impact upon women and children, is one of critical importance to us in the 1990s.

The tragedy of violence in the home is that it's often hidden, it is a 'secret' shielded from the outside world and women/children are often isolated from support and help. Figures and statistics concerning incidence rates are alarming and ongoing research is showing that the effects of violence upon families is widespread and long-

Abused women and their abusers (95 percent of all abusers are men) may be rich or poor, live in rural or urban areas, be young, middle-aged or old and have any level of education. Although some battered women may be job-less, others are doctors, lawyers, full-time homemakers, secretaries, mill workers, nurses and others.

Battered women are found in all socio-economic and ethnic groups. More than 50 percent of women in our country are battered sometime in their lifetime; one third are battered repeatedly each year. In Maine, the attorney general estimates that between 40,000 and 50,000 women are battered each year. Sixty-eight women have been murdered in the past decade as a result of abuse.

The Bethel Area Health Center recognizes the need for services for battered women and their children in Western Oxford County and the Bethel area. The "Safer Families Program." the Health Center's newest domestic violence project, plans through community education, direct support for women and recruitment and training of volunteers to begin to meet the demonstrated local needs. We will continue to publicize data regarding this most serious social issue. Anyone wishing to obtain more information about volunteering or details about services is urged to call the coordinator at 824-2193.

Congratulations to those participants completing the "Freedom From Smoking" classes through the Health Center. Keep up the positive lifestyle changes. It's worth it! There will be another "Freedom From Smoking" course this fall. We will be an-

NEW HYGIENIST-Nancy Buck of Harrison, right, will be joining the staff of denist John Mason in August. Buck is a Bethel native, who attended the University of Maine at Bangor. She is now employed by Dino Stavros, DMD of Portland. This is Mason's 15th year in Bethel. He is currently redecorating and re-equipping three treatment rooms. In addition to hiring a new hygienist, Mason has also hired another dental assistant to meet his clientele's demand for preventive and maintenance services, he said.

Rotary Club notes

The Tuesday, July 9, breakfast meeting was a planning and discussion session for the Mollyockett Day barbeand teaching natural resources educaque event that the Rotary has had for many years. There will be an ongoing discussion this year, led by president elect Jeff Parsons as to whether Rotary continues this activity.

President David Murphy made areas of forestry, recycling, wildlife, several announcements pertaining to marine resources, agriculture, water the upcoming Rotary auction, Friday, July 19, 6:30 p.m. at Telstar.

Scott Dennis had Rotary informa- biologists, foresters, wildlife wardens, tion where he quoted the Rotary four-recycling coordinators and other state way-test out of a novel he was reading. It's amazing how widespread Rotary's work and mission is in this world.

Guests this morning included Bill Lowther, Gil Robinson and Jim Wiswell, summer regulars; Glenn Huntley and Curtis Cole from Oxford Hills; Nike Dinar from Pawtucket, R.I.; Dan Honan from Newtown, Water Conservation District. Cost for Conn.; and Joyce Pulton and Oscar Legere from Rumford.

Ask A Lawyer

We have a son, 36 years old, who lives at home. He has an enormous amount of debt, including hospital and physicians' bills, ongoing expenses for a chronic medical condition, and other day-to-day expenses. He is a carpenter and has never made much money. We have tried to help him. We are close to retirement age, have little money or assets, and are concerned about our financial condition. We are particularly concerned that we will be held liable for our son's expenses. Are we obligated to help him? What are our rights?

Generally, parents are not obligated to pay debts incurred by their 'emancipated" children. A child becomes legally emancipated when he or she attains the age of 19, graduates from high school, or is emancipated by order of the court—whichever event occurs first. After a child becomes emancipated, parents are only obligated to pay those debts of the child that they have agreed to pay. For example, parents may become obligated to pay a child's loan that they have either co-signed or guaranteed. This situation typically arises with automobile loans, first time loans, and student loans. A parent is responsible for a child's medical expenses if the parent signs a document accepting responsibility for payment. A creditor to who a parent guarantees payment may pursue the parent even though the child is the person principally obligated to repay the debt.

Also, a parent may be held liable on an oral contract to pay debt. For example, if a parent says to a child's creditor, "Don't worry, I'll take care of your bill," the parent has agreed to pay the debt and a contract is established. Be careful of what you say as well as what you sign.

There are also other circumstances in which parents can be responsible for their child's debt. The Uniform Civil Liability for Support Act, found in the Maine Revised Statutes at Title 19, Section 441, imposes a duty upon parents to support a son or daughter of whatever age who is incapacitated from earning a living and without sufficient means. The law is designed to impose a duty to support children who, because of their mental or physical infirmity, may become charges of the

Under the law, the incapacitated child can bring an action for support, or, if the state already provides support to the incapacitated child, the state can sue the parents for the child's support. This statute can be invoked, however, only when the child lacks the ability to earn a living. The statute does not apply unless the criterion is

If your son is healthy enough to earn a living and you have not promised his creditors that you will pay his bills. you are not liable. He will need to deal with his creditors on his own and be responsible for his own accidents, condition and choices. As parents, your biggest responsibility is to provide love, encouragement and an environment which will help your son to become independent.

THOUGHTS FROM THE Pastor's Study

The Bethel Area Clergy Association, with the help of pastors of surrounding churches, brings you these meditations. Not based on any set theme, they will be individual for each pastor. It is hoped you will find in these words, comfort and help for your daily life.

Some years ago, after a day of work in hot, humid weather, we decided on an evening drive. We stopped at the turnout at the old picnic grounds in Upton overlooking Umbagog Lake. The view here is usually spectacular, and on this particular evening it was extraordinarily so. The sun had just set and the sky was aglow with color. The varying light and shade on the scene below and around us gave such contrast that it enhanced the beauty our eyes beheld.

As we sat gazing upon the splendor. I could not but think of those words in the eighteenth Psalm "What is man that thou art mindful of him?"

Truly perhaps this is a question we should all ask God more often. Do we truly live up to what we should be? The Psalmist in verse three of this Psalm calls attention to God's work in the beginning. He speaks of the heavens, the moon and the stars which God hath ordained.

We have all drank in the beauty of many of nature's beautiful spots. It sometimes seems so commonplace that we fail to think of it as a work of God.

We are fortunate in our area. In a comparatively easy day's drive we can enjoy mountain scenes, rolling countryside, some of the flatter farmlands, and some of the most beautiful ocean scenery offered anywhere, whether you prefer the beaches or the rockbound coast. And that does not mention our many beautiful lakes, ponds, and rivers. A short time ago, I visited Step Falls in Newry with members of my family. I have always loved to see swift water and waterfalls, and listen to its sound, and although the water was low that day, we still could enjoy the silvery cascading water over the rock and the crystal clear pools into which they ran. It was truly a beautiful and chinson Pond in Albany awesome sight, the large boulders along the stream, that had undoubtedly at one time been further up the hillside. The ledge of the stream's bed had been worn smooth over the years by the rushing water. Yes, truly a beautiful scene. As I sat there I thought of how such a short distance away so many rode by on the highway not knowing or "maybe not caring" about the beauty they were missing. There are many other beauties also that God has given us. Those of unseen things, the beauty of true peace, of salvation and eternal life.

Many do not see these things or know of them because they are too taken up with worldly things. They blindly pass by, apparently not even knowing or caring of their existence.
